Carrot Tree Kitchens
Williamsburg & Yorktown

We feed the Historic Triangle!

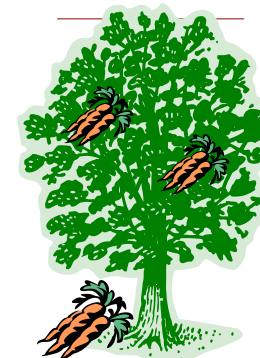

Cole Digges built this house about 1720. He was a son of the area's most successful tobacco grower and chose to enter the merchant trade. Cole purchased the property in 1713 because it included wharves and warehouses at the foot of Read St. as well. In choosing to present this house as a restaurant, the National Park Service requested a low impact operation. The desire to preserve the historic integrity of the house precludes commercial dishwashing and high heat sources. Future plans call for the building of a separate kitchen to allow for expanded, traditional restaurant operations. In the meantime, please enjoy what the Cole Digges house and Carrot Tree have to offer.

The story of Carrot Tree is not quite as old as the story of Cole Digges. In 1984, challenged by a restaurant manager to produce a better carrot cake, Debi did so; by calling her grandmother at midnight for the family recipe and shopping and baking till 3 am! She burned up a few home ovens before building her first commercial bakery—in her home garage! That was 1990. In 1995, she opened Carrot Tree Kitchens on Jamestown Rd., Williamsburg's only scratch bakery in years. Café operations evolved over time. Every day, every thing Debi does, she does fresh from scratch. She is one of those few restaurant owners for whom food remains a love, not a business. We opened the Cole Digges House in 2003. We are pleased you have become a part of the continuing history of Carrot Tree, of the Cole Digges House and of Yorktown.
